

Prevent Blindness

Annual Report
2023

Message from the CEO and Board Chair

This year, Prevent Blindness celebrated its 115th anniversary. As we looked back on more than a century of service we also continued to look forward to our future and the forces that shape eye and vision health for all of us. Prevent Blindness has long stood as a beacon of help and support for children and adults hoping for a lifetime of healthy vision, patients living with eye disease and vision loss, and for professionals and organizations working to improve our nation's eye and vision care.

As we reflect on this year's achievements, we must first and foremost thank the Prevent Blindness affiliates that deliver critical services at the state and community levels, the partner organizations that share our goals and leverage our achievements, the volunteers who bring their dedication and expertise to our efforts, and of course the foundations, corporate sponsors and individual donors who fund our sight-saving programs. They are all tirelessly dedicated to the cause of transforming lives by preventing blindness and saving sight.

No part of our work represents the cause of individuals more than the ASPECT Patient Engagement Program. This groundbreaking initiative deeply involves individuals in their own eye care journeys and fosters a more personalized and effective approach to support for caregivers and patients living with eye disease and vision loss. ASPECT members like Judge Rosalind Isom shared their stories of living with visual impairment this year as part of the 2023 World Sight Day under the theme "Love Your Eyes at Work."

The National Center for Children's Vision and Eye Health at Prevent Blindness continues to shine brightly as a core driver of our mission. For nearly fifteen years, the Center has led ongoing efforts to build systems of vision care around the country that support the ocular health of our youngest population. This work includes leadership with the Children's Vision Equity Alliance, partnerships with organizations such as BlackDoctor.org, organization of free professional webinars that address pressing issues in children's eye care, the development of evidence-based guidelines, and the training and certification of children's vision screeners working around the country.

2023 also saw the advancement of new educational and awareness campaigns. The October 14 annular eclipse across North America brought an opportunity for Prevent Blindness to educate the public on safe viewing practices through the Eclipse + Your Eyes Campaign. This initiative merged the immense scientific curiosity about these cosmic events with essential eye safety information that emphasized the joy of seeing the universe. The Gr8 Eye Movement, championed by Debbie Allen, and the Focus on Eye Health Expert Series served as pivotal platforms for raising awareness and disseminating valuable information on eye health.

For those living with specific conditions, The Glaucoma Community offered a haven of support and information, while initiatives like Thyroid Eye Disease Awareness Week and GA Awareness Week catered to specific conditions, shedding light on these often misunderstood eye diseases. Our Living Well With Low Vision web resource provided essential resources that promote improved quality of life for individuals living with vision impairment and their caregivers.

Prevent Blindness published a new brief on vision impairment and mental wellbeing, a crucial aspect of health and quality of life often overshadowed in discussions about physical health. It also expanded its diabetes education with new online content for youth living with diabetes.

Advocacy efforts continued with legislative briefings, expert testimony, and the “Eyes on Capitol Hill” Legislative Day. Prevent Blindness launched a new online resource: advocacy.preventblindness.org to provide individuals with tools and training to advocate for vision health at a legislative level. The commitment of Prevent Blindness to global initiatives was also evident in its support for the UN Special Envoy on Vision.

Danielle Crull, ABOM and Truffles the Kitty received the 2023 Bonnie Stickland Champion for Children's Vision Award for her efforts to raise awareness of vision disorders in children.

Under the theme "Why the Eye?," the two-day 2023 Focus on Eye Health Summit delved into, among other topics, the intricate connection between communities and vision care, and how recent advances in eye care impact patients and quality of life.

These are just a few of the efforts that help pave the way for a patient-focused future where eye health is a priority for all. Through our comprehensive programs, focused advocacy, and unwavering commitment to ensuring access to vision care for all, we are confident that Prevent Blindness will continue to be a guiding light in the quest to prevent blindness and preserve sight for generations to come.
